

We are educating the next generation

The Natural Sciences trips at Cambridge recognises the modern blurring of rigid scientific boundaries and gives students the almost unparalleled opportunity to study a range of scientific disciplines before they specialise in their final year. Their access to the world's best researchers and teachers, working at the forefront of a variety of fields, crucially enhances their scientific breadth and understanding. We also nurture and stretch our 330 postgraduates, who work hand in hand with our world-class researchers in an intensive one-year MPhil programme or as PhD candidates. Our outreach programmes demonstrate the excitement of chemistry to a whole new generation.

